

HUF

To Hu'ndie. v. n. To come in a crowd or hurry.
Glance an eye of pity on his losses,
That have of late so buddled on his back,
Enough to press a royal merchant down. Shakespeare.
Brown answered after his blunt and buddling manner. Bacon.
Thyris, whose artful strains have oft delay'd
The buddling brook to hear his madrigal,
And sweeten'd every muskrose of the dale. Milton.
Their eyes are more imperfect than others; for they will run against things, and, buddling forwards, fall from high places. Brown's Vulgar Errors.
HUDDLE. n. f. [from the verb.] Crowd; tumult; confusion.
That the Aristotelian philosophy is a buddle of words and terms insignificant, has been the censure of the wise. Glanv.
Your carrying business in a buddle,
Has forc'd our rulers to new model. Hudibras, p. iii.
Nature doth nothing in a buddle. L'Estrange.
The understanding sees nothing distinctly in things remote,
and in a buddle. Locke.
Several merry answers were made to my question, which entertained us 'till bed-time, and filled my mind with a buddle of ideas. Addison's Spectator.
HUE. n. f. [Saxo, Saxon.]
1. Colour; die.
For never in that land
Face of fair lady she before did view,
Or that dread lion's look her cast in deadly bue. Fairy Q.
For now three months have changed thrice their bue. Fairy Queen, canto viii.
To add another bue unto the rainbow,
Is wasteful and ridiculous excess. Shakef. King John.
Flowers of all bues, and without thorn the rose. Milton.
To whom the angel, with a smile that glow'd
Celestial rosy red, love's proper bue, Answer'd. Milton's Paradise Lost, b. viii.
Your's is much of the camelion bue,
To change the die with distant view. Dryden.
2. [Hue, French.] A clamour; a legal pursuit; an alarm given to the country.
Hue and cry, villain, go! Assist me, knight, I am undone:
Ay, run, bue and cry! villain, I am undone. Shakespeare.
Immediately comes a bue and cry after a gang of thieves, that had taken a purse upon the road. L'Estrange.
If you should hiss, he swears he'll hiss as high;
And, like a culprit, join the bue and cry. Addison.
The bue and cry went after Jack, to apprehend him dead or alive, wherever he could be found. Arbutnot's John Bull.
HUE. n. f. [Saxo, French, to cry.] One whose business is to call out to others.
They lie hovering upon the coast, and are directed by a halberd or bue, who stands on the cliff-side, and from thence directeth the course of the pilchard. Carew's Survey of Cornwall.
HUFF. n. f. [from hove, or hove, swelled: he is huffed up by distempers. So in some provinces we still say the bread huffs up, when it begins to hove or ferment: buff, therefore, may be ferment. To be in a buff is then to be in a ferment, as we now speak.]
1. Swell of sudden anger or arrogance.
Quoth Ralpho, honour's but a word
To swear by only in a lord;
In others it is but a buff,
To vapour with instead of proof. Hudibras, p. ii.
His frowns kept multitudes in awe,
Before the bluster of whole buff.
All hats, as in a storm, flew off. Hudibras.
We have the apprehensions of a change to keep a check upon us in the very buff of our greatness. L'Estrange.
A Spaniard was wonderfully upon the buff about his extraction. L'Estrange.
No man goes about to enslave or circumvent another in a passion, to lay train, and give secret blows in a present buff. South's Sermons.
2. A wretch swelled with a false opinion of his own value.
Lewd shallow-brained buffs make atheism and contempt of religion the sole badge and character of wit. South.
As for you, colonel buff-cap, we shall try before a civil magistrate who's the greater plotter. Dryden's Spanish Fryar.
To HUFF. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To swell; to puff.
In many wild birds the diaphragm may easily be huffed up with air, and blown in at the windpipe. Grew's Cosmol. Sac.
2. To heave; to treat with insolence and arrogance, or brutality.
To HUFF. v. n. To bluster; to storm; to bounce; to swell with indignation or pride.
This senseless arrogant conceit of theirs made them buff at the doctrine of repentance, as a thing below them. South.
A buffing, shining, flat'ring, cringing coward,
A cankerworm of peace, was rais'd above him. Orway.
A thief and justice, fool and knave,
A buffing officer and slave. Hudibras, p. iii. cant. 3.
Buffing to cowards, fawning to the brave,
To knaves a fool, to credulous fools a knave. Rescommon.

HUL

Now what's his end? O charming glory, say!
What, a fifth act to crown his buffing play? Dryd. Juvenal.
What a small pittance of reason and truth is mixed with those buffing opinions they are swelled with. Locke.
When Peg received John's message, she buffed and stormed like the devil. Arbutnot's History of John Bull.
HUFFER. n. f. [from buff.] A blusterer; a bully.
Nor have I hazarded my art
To be expos'd i' th' end to suffer,
By such a braggadocio buffer. Hudibras, p. ii. cant. 3.
HUFFISH. adj. [from buff.] Arrogant; insolent; hectoring.
HUFFISHLY. adv. [from buffish.] With arrogant petulance;
with bullying bluster.
HUFFISHNESS. n. f. Petulance; arrogance; noisy bluster.
To HUG. v. a. [Saxo, Saxon, to hedge, to inclose.]
1. To press close in an embrace.
He bewent my fortune,
And hugg'd me in his arms. Shakef. Richard III.
What would not he do now to hug the creature that had given him so admirable a serenade! L'Estrange.
Ev'n in that urn their brother they confess,
And hug it in their arms, and to their bosom press. Dryden.
King Xerxes was enamour'd upon an oak, which he would hug and kiss. Harvey on Conjunctions.
2. To fondle; to treat with tenderness.
I, under fair pretence of friendly ends,
And well-plac'd words of glozing courtesy,
Baited with reasons not unplaurable,
Win me into the easy-hearted man,
And bug him into snarcs. Milton.
We bug deformities, if they bear our names. Glanville.
Admire yourself,
And, without rival, bug your darling book. Rescommon.
Though they know that the flatterer knows the falsehood of his own flatteries, yet they love the impostor, and with both arms bug the abuse. South's Sermons.
Mark with what joy he hugs the dear discovery! Rowe.
3. To hold fast.
Age makes us most fondly bug and retain the good things of life, when we have the least prospect of enjoying them. Alsted.
HUG. n. f. [from the noun.] Close embrace.
Why these close hugs? I owe my flame to him. Goy.
HUGE. adj. [Saxo, high, Dutch.]
1. Vast; immense.
Let the state of the people of God, when they were in the house of bondage, and their manner of serving God in a strange land, be compared with that which Canaan and Jerusalem did afford; and who sees not what huge difference there was between them? Hooker, b. iv.
This space of earth is so huge, as that it equalled in greatness not only Asia, Europe and Africa, but America. Alsted.
2. Great even to deformity or terrible.
The patch is kind enough, but a huge feeder. Shakef.
Through forests huge, and long untravell'd heaths,
With desolation brown he wanders waste. Thomson's Spring.
HUGELY. adv. [from huge.]
1. Immenfely; enormously.
Who cries out on pride,
That can therein tax any private party?
Doth it not flow as hugely as the sea? Shakef. As you like it.
2. Greatly; very much.
I am hugely bent to believe, that whenever you concern yourself in our affairs, it is for our good. Swift.
HUGENESS. n. f. [from huge.] Enormous bulk; greatness.
My mistress exceeds in goodness the hugeness of your unworthy thinking. Shakespeare's Cymbeline.
HUGGERMUGGER. n. f. [corrupted perhaps from bug or mucker, or hug in the dark. Mucker in Danish is darkness, whence our mucky. It is written by Sir Thomas More, later mucker.
Hoker, in Chaucer, is peculiar, crossgrained, of which moker may be only a ludicrous reduplication. Hoake is likewise in German a corner, and moky is in English dark. I know not how to determine.] Secrecy; by-place.
Now hold in huggermugger in their hand,
And all the rest do rob of goods and land. Habberd's Tale.
But if I can but find them out,
Where e'er th' in huggermugger lurk,
I'll make them rue their handy-work. Hudibras, p. i.
There's a distinction betwixt what's done openly and barefaced, and a thing that's done in huggermugger, under a seal of secrecy and concealment. L'Estrange's Fables.
HUGGY. adj. [See HUGE.] Vast; great; huge.
This buggy rock one finger's force
Apparently will move. Carew's Survey of Cornwall.
HUKE. n. f. [Saxo, French.] A cloak.
As we were thus in conference, there came one that seem'd to be a messenger in a rich huke. Bacon's New Atlantis.
HULK. n. f. [Saxo, Dutch; Saxon.]
1. The body of a ship.
There's a whole merchant's venture of Bourdeaux stuff in him: you have not seen a hulk better stuffed in the hold. Shakef.
The

HUM

The custom they had of giving the colour of the sea to the hulks, sails, and mariners of their spy-boats, to keep them from being discovered, came from the Veneti. Arbutnot.
They Argo's hulk will tax,
And scrape her pitchy sides for wax. Swift.
The footy hulk Thomson's Autumn.
Steer'd sluggish on.
2. Anything bulky and unwieldy. This sense is still retained in Scotland: as, a hulk of a fellow.
And Harry Monmouth's brawn, the hulk fir John,
Is prisoner to your son. Shakespeare's Henry IV. p. ii.
To HULK. v. a. To exenterate: as, to hulk a hare. Ainsw.
HULL. n. f. [Saxo, Gothic, to cover.]
1. The hull or integument of any thing; the outer covering:
as, the hull of a nut covers the shell. [Hule, Scottish.]
2. The body of a ship; the hulk. Hull and hulk are now confounded; but hulk seems originally to have signified not merely the body or hull, but a whole ship of burden, heavy and bulky.
Deep in their hulls our deadly bullets light,
And through the yielding planks a passage find. Dryden.
So many arts hath the Divine Widom put together, only for the hull and tackle of a sensible and thinking creature.
Grew's Cosmol. Sac. b. i. c. 5.
To HULL. v. n. [from the noun.] To float; to drive to and fro upon the water without sails or rudder.
They saw a fight full of piteous strangeness; a ship, or rather the carcass of the ship, or rather some few bones of the carcass, hulling there, part broken, part burned, and part drowned. Sidney.
Will you hoist sail, fir? here lies your way.
—No, good swabber, I am to hull here a little longer. Shak.
He look'd, and saw the ark hull on the flood,
Which now abated. Milton's Parad. Lost, b. xi.
People walking down upon the shore, saw somewhat come hulling toward them. L'Estrange.
HULLY. adj. [from hull.] Silique; husky. Ainsworth.
HULLY. n. f. Holly.
Save hully and thorn, thereof sail for to make. Thaffer.
To HUM. v. a. [Dutch, Dutch.]
1. To make the noise of bees.
The humming of bees is an unequal buzzing. Bacon.
An airy nation flew,
Thick as the humming bees that hunt the golden dew
In Summer's heat. Dryden's En. b. vi.
So weary bees in little cells repose;
But if night-robbers lift the well-stor'd hive,
An humming through their waxen city grows. Dryden.
2. To make an inarticulate and buzzing found.
I think he'll hear me: yet to bite his lip,
And hum at good Cominius, much unhearts me. Shakef.
Upon my honour, fir, I heard a humming,
And that a strange one too, which did awake me. Shakef.
The cloudy messenger turns me his back,
And hums; as who should say, you'll rue. Shakef. Macbeth.
3. To pause in speaking, and supply the interval with an audible emission of breath.
Having pump'd up all his wit,
And hum'd upon it, thus he writ. Hudibras, p. iii.
I still acquiesce,
And never hum'd and haw'd sedition,
Nor snuffed treason. Hudibras, p. iii. cant. 2.
The man lay humming and hawing a good while; but, in the end, he gave up himself to the physicians. L'Estrange.
Still humming on, their drowsy course they keep,
And last'd so long, like tops, are last'd asleep. Pope.
4. To sing low.
The musical accents of the Indians, to us, are but inarticulate humming; as are ours to their otherwise tuned organs. Glanv. Apol.
Hum half a tune. Pope.
5. To applaud. Approbation was commonly expressed in publick assemblies by a hum, about a century ago.
Hum. n. f. [from the verb.]
1. The noise of bees or insects.
To black Hecate's summons
The shard-born beetle, with his drowsy hums,
Hath rung night's yawning peal. Shakespeare's Macbeth.
Nor undelightful is the ceaseless hum,
To him who muses through the woods at noon. Thomson.
2. The noise of bustling crowds.
From camp to camp, through the foul womb of night,
The hum of either army still founds. Shakef. Hen. V.
Tower'd cities please us then,
And the busy hum of men. Milton.
One theatre there is of vast resort,
Which whilome of requests was call'd the court;
But now the great exchange of news 'tis light,
And full of hum and buz from noon 'till night. Dryden.
3. Any low dull noise.
Who sat the nearest, by the words o'ercome,
Slept fast; the distant nodded to the hum. Pope's Dunciad.

HUM

4. A pause with an inarticulate sound.
These thrugs, these hums and haws,
When you have said the's goodly, come between,
'Ere you can say the's honest. Shakef. Winter's Tale.
Your excuses want some grains to make 'em current: hum
and ha will not do the business. Dryden's Spanish Fryar.
5. In Hudibras it seems used for ham.
And though his countrymen the Huns,
Did stew their meat between their hums,
And the horses backs o'er which they straddle,
And ev'ry man eat up his saddle. Hudibras, p. i. cant. ii.
6. An expression of applause.
You hear a hum in the right place. Spectator.
HUM. interject. A sound implying doubt and deliberation.
Let not your ears despite the heaviest found That ever yet they heard.
—Hum! I guess at it. Shakespeare's Macbeth.
See fir Robert—hum! Pope.
And never laugh for all my life to come.
HUMAN. adj. [humanus, Latin; humain, French.]
1. Having the qualities of a man.
It will not be asked whether he be a gentleman born, but whether he be a human creature. Swift.
2. Belonging to man.
The king is but a man as I am: the violet smells to him as it doth to me; all his senses have but human conditions. Shakef.
For man to tell how human life began
Is hard; for who himself beginning knew? Milton's P. L.
Thee, serpent, subtil'it beaft of all the field,
I knew; but not with human voice indu'd. Milt. Par. Lost.
Intuitive knowledge needs no probation, nor can have any,
this being the highest of all human certainty. Locke.
HUMANE. adj. [humaine, French.] Kind; civil; benevolent;
good-natured.
Love of others, if it be not spent upon a few, doth naturally spread itself towards many, and maketh men become humane and charitable. Bacon's Essay.
Envy, malice, covetousness and revenge are abolished: a new race of virtues and graces, more divine, more moral, more humane, are planted in their stead. Spratt's Sermons.
HUMANELY. adv. [from humane.] Kindly; with good-nature.
If they would yield us the superfluity, while it were wholesome, we might guess they relieved us humanely. Shakespeare.

Look to thyself; reach not beyond humanity. Sidney.
A rarer spirit never did steer humanity. Shakespeare.
The middle of humanity thou never knewest, but the extremity of both ends. Shakef. Timon of Athens.
To preserve the Hebrew intire and uncorrupt, there hath been used the highest caution humanity could invent. Brown.
2. Humankind; the collective body of mankind.
If he can untie those knots, he is able to teach all humanity, and will do well to oblige mankind by his informations. Glan.
3. Benevolence; tenderness.
All men ought to maintain peace, and the common offices of humanity and friendship in diversity of opinions. Locke.
How few, like thee, enquire the wretched out,
And court the offices of soft humanity?
Like thee reserve their raiment for the naked,
Reach out their bread to feed the crying orphan,
Or mix their pitying tears with those that weep? Rowe.
4. Philology; grammatical studies.
To HUMANIZE. v. a. [humaniser, French.] To soften; to make susceptible of tenderness or benevolence.
